Storm front ravages highways Two in serious condition

BY JODI STYNER
Didsbury Review

Firefighters worked for nearly an hour to free a woman from a vehicle Wednesday afternoon, after it was struck head-on on the QE II highway. A red SUV, carrying a lone female occupant, crossed the median and collided with a blue Sunbird, travelling northbound.

Police are blaming poor weather conditions for the accident.

"That's probably the biggest concern, that STARS couldn't fly."

SGT. KEVIN O'DWYER
Didsbury RCMP

"A system came through at about 2:30 p.m. and the road went to sheer ice," said Didsbury RCMP Sgt. Kevin O'Dwyer.

Both the driver of the SUV and the Sunbird's 25-year-old passenger were taken to a Calgary hospital by ground ambulance in serious condition.

STARS air ambulance was called to the scene, but was grounded due to bad weather.

"That's probably the biggest concern, that STARS couldn't fly," said Sgt. O'Dwyer.

"We were quite concerned about the gal in the (Sunbird)."

Emergency crews responded to four other accidents Wednesday.

A single vehicle rollover just before the Carstairs overpass, two others on Hwy. 580, and another on Hwy. 582 all resulted in minor injuries.

Police are urging drivers to take caution as driving conditions worsen, especially when accelerating uphill.

"Make it like you have an egg between your foot and the gas pedal and you don't want to crush that egg," said Sgt. O'Dwyer.

"That's how you accelerate and that's how you drive in the wintertime."

The other big thing to remember is to "just say no to cruise."

Cruise control works to maintain a vehicle's speed, so when it's travelling uphill, it will cause the vehicle to accelerate. When the roads are icy, that can send wheels spinning. As the wheels start to spin, cruise control thinks it needs to accelerate more, and to deactivate the cruise, the driver needs to push the brake down.

"Now your back wheels are spinning and your front wheels are locked and you're gone, you're going for a ride," said Sgt. O'Dwyer.

Finally, O'Dwyer implores drivers approaching the scene of an accident to avoid "rubbernecking", which can cause more collisions, especially where large trucks that need ample time to stop are involved.

HEAD-ON — Hands hold a woman's head still as firefighters work to extricate her from a car involved in a head-on collision on QE II, south of the Didsbury overpass at approximately 3:40 p.m., Nov. 8. The northbound car, carrying two occupants, was hit head-on by a southbound SUV when the lone occupant lost control of her vehicle. Two females were taken to Foothills Hospital by ground ambulance with unknown injuries. STARS was grounded during the storm; RCMP say icy roads were a factor. Their investigation continues.

Local man arrested in dog protest

Vows to lodge formal complaint against police

BY JODI STYNER
AND STEPHANIE MYLES
Didsbury Review

Actions that landed a 34-year-old Didsbury man on the front page of various newspapers across south-central Alberta last week also landed him in jail.

Denny Stabenow, known locally as Drew Marceton, was arrested and charged with mischief following a protest outside the Didsbury Provincial Courthouse Nov. 6, where 19-year-old Daniel Charles Haskett was attending a hearing to answer charges of animal cruelty in the death of his family dog.

"I think what made me snap was the pompous arrogance about (Haskett) when he came out, like he was some kind of rock star."

DREW MARCETON

Marceton admits to kicking and hitting the van that transported Haskett away from the courthouse, but says he doesn't think his actions were any worse than those of other protestors.

He said it was never his intention to cause trouble.

"I was going there for a minute, come back, have breakfast, go to work, that was my intention," said Marceton.

"I think what made me snap was the pompous arrogance about (Haskett) when he came out, like he was some kind of rock star. I was very close to him at the time and the way he looked at me just set me off."

Marceton admits to acting out in a "fit of rage", but claims he was mistreated by police and is vowing to lodge a formal complaint against the arresting officer.

"As soon as I got to my vehicle, I was just getting in, and this plainclothes officer put a handcuff on me and I started to scream and he covered up my mouth and finished handcuffing me and stuffed me back into my own truck and locked it," said Marceton.

"I leaned on the horn to get somebody's attention and nobody even knew what was happening."

Marceton said an RCMP truck pulled up, the officer grabbed his arm and threw him into the truck and he was "whisked" to the police station.

Didsbury RCMP Corp. Kevin Fischer said a plainclothes officer did arrest Marceton and he was escorted to the Didsbury detachment by uniformed officers in a marked police vehicle.

That was around 10:30 a.m. and, according to Marceton, he sat in a jail cell until 4 p.m. when he was released and told of the mischief charge.

During that time span, Marceton said he was made to feel like a "dirtbag" and admits to becoming belligerent as a result.

He has since met with the RCMP to express his feelings and said they were quite receptive to his request to meet.

During that meeting, Marceton informed Corp. Fischer of his intent to lodge a formal complaint.

Police can't comment on specifics in the case while it's still before the courts, but Corp. Fischer said the arrest was done by the books.

"He was arrested, he was provided with all his Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms and afforded the opportunity to contact legal counsel, which he did do," he said.

"For me, I don't think that we're really in a situation where we even had to defend what we did."

Corp. Fischer said 90 per cent of people who are arrested claim they were wrongfully arrested, so this is not a surprise.

Marceton's concern now, is that a criminal charge could hurt him professionally.

He's currently working as a hairdresser in Olds, but also has a security licence and has worked in hospitals within the DTHR.

"I volunteered with the RCMP for many years in Olds and I'm in the security business," he said.

"I'm upset that a criminal charge on me could ruin my chances of working in a hospital again."

Marceton is set to meet with a lawyer this week and will discuss how to proceed in the case, but he expects to enter a guilty plea.

"I'm the type who would take responsibility for my actions and I'm prepared to take whatever's coming to me," he said.

"I feel it's so unfair, but I'd be prepared to take that for sure."

Marceton is scheduled to make a first appearance Dec. 11 at 10 a.m. in Didsbury Provincial Court.

Haskett is expected to enter a plea in his case Nov. 22.

EDITORIAL &amp; OPINION

Do as I say,
not as I do?

Stand in any lineup in Didsbury or Olds and you're bound to get caught up in a conversation about Wal-Mart and how awful it is.

The prospect of a giant, one-stop shopping store bearing the dreaded Wal-Mart name even has some residents contemplating drafting a petition to stop it from happening.

But by the comments overheard in these lineups, it might be safe to say that residents have taken a "do as I say, not as I do" approach to their arguments.

I was paying for a snow shovel at a local hardware store recently when I overheard another customer complaining that businesses like this one could easily be destroyed if Wal-Mart is allowed to invade Olds.

There he was, nobly supporting a local business like a good citizen, right?

But his subsequent comments stomped snuffed out his credibility.

"I was at Wal-Mart in Red Deer the other day and it was insane," he said.

"I stood in line for 20 minutes."

So let me get this straight. First of all, he shops at the very place he finds deplorable, and second, the thing he's most frustrated by is how busy it is.

As I pondered this, the cashier piped in to criticize Wal-Mart's management practices, saying that when her daughter worked there, she was paid next to nothing.

Then, catching herself, she said, "but I still shop there, so I guess I can't really complain."

Well, at least this woman had the sense to recognize that she was being hypocritical.

The customer just stood there with a dumbfounded look on his face, blinking at her, and probably wondering what her point was.

My point is this: If you're going to draft a petition or even sign a petition, asking for a Wal-Mart ban in the community, or you hear yourself verbally slamming a mega-corporation of any kind, pause for a second and think about whether or not you can back yourself up with more than words or a signature.

Actions do, in fact, speak louder than words.

PONDERINGS OF THE HEART A note of encouragement

BY MARGARET FRADLEY
For the Review

Some time ago we read an article of a young man from Spruce View who, at the age of 16, lost the use of his legs and was confined to a wheelchair.

This young man was an athlete, and through a physiotherapist, was encouraged to try basketball.

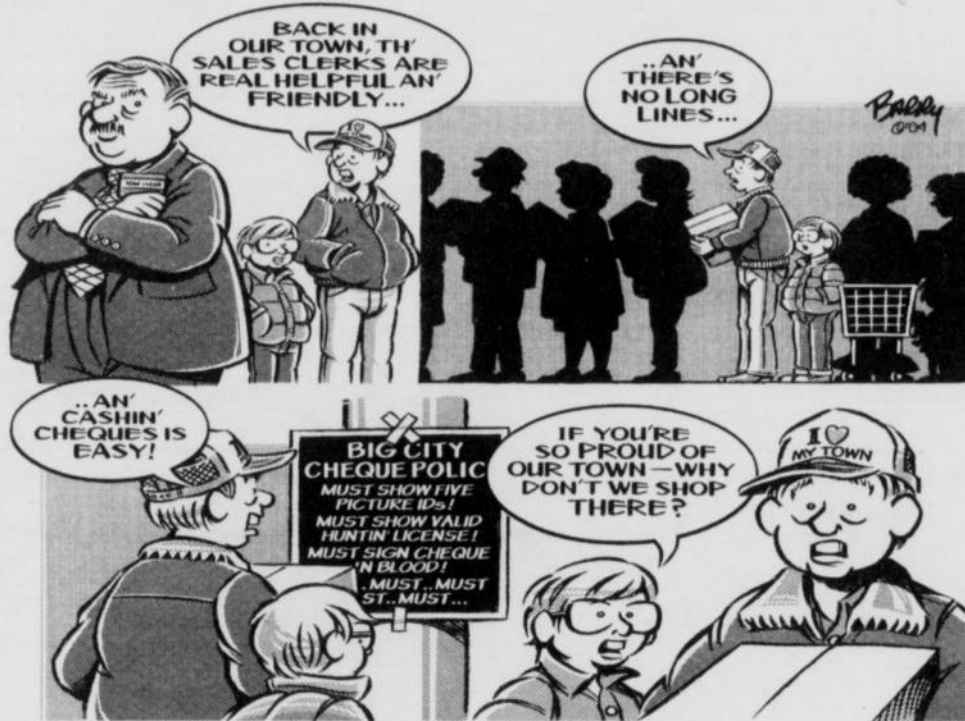

He eagerly began to take part in the sport. He later landed a spot on Canada's national wheelchair basketball team.

In 2006, this young man competed in the World Cup. The story, from a wheelchair to standing on the podium to receive a gold medal, was to me an amazing story of courage, perseverance and faith.

How often we are faced with a situation that seems almost hopeless, where temporarily we can see no solution, it is at this time we need to read those "God Stories" as I call them, and be strongly encouraged and strengthened by them.

We hear so many negative stories these days; the media fills us in on all the devastating news, our friends are going through trials, however, this story bears making headlines.

I hope it lifted your spirits as it did mine.

YOUR LETTERS

MP pushes animal bill

Many Albertans were shocked and outraged to learn of the torture of a Labrador-border collie cross named Daisy Duke last month in Didsbury. The poor dog had its legs and mouth bound with duct tape, and she was dragged a kilometre behind a vehicle, leaving a trail of blood. As a result of her injuries, she was euthanized, and her owner and a juvenile have been charged.

Coincidentally, I had been preparing to reintroduce a private member's bill in the House of Commons on animal cruelty. Earlier versions of my bill were put forward by the government in every parliament since 1999, but failed to pass when the House and Senate couldn't agree on amendments. My bill, C-373, was introduced on Oct. 30, and it is identical to the former Bill C-50. The current Criminal Code provisions on animal cruelty have changed very little since 1892 and are hopelessly outdated.

This is an issue that must cut across party differences, and I hope to work with MPs from all political parties to ensure its passage. The rules for private members' bills make it difficult to pass them, and therefore I am asking Canadians to urge the government to adopt this as a government bill.

In the seven years that this bill has been debated, there has been enormous effort to strike the right balance between the need to protect animals from intentional cruelty, and the need to recognize the legitimate rights of hunters, anglers, farmers and others who use animals responsibly for sport or their livelihoods. This bill achieves that balance.

Those who engage in serious violent crimes such as serial murder often start by abusing animals, which can be an early indicator of crimes against people. Therefore, effective animal cruelty legislation can allow the justice system to intervene early with people who might go on to other serious crimes.

Please encourage your Member of Parliament to work with me on this important initiative.

It's time we stand up for our four-legged friends.

Mark Holland, MP
Ajax-Pickering, ON

In support of a friend

I recently attended court on Nov. 6 to support my friend, who has been accused of torturing a dog. I want to make it clear that I agree animal cruelty is wrong, but you have not heard the whole story. I do support him as a friend, though. I am not writing this letter to defend anyone, but I simply wish to discuss the manner in which the public is choosing to deal with the situation and how pathetic it really is.

In any news articles I have read, they fail to mention that my two friends and I were chased back to our vehicles by angry protestors with threats like, "You're filthy maggots who deserve to go to hell." And being told that we all deserve to be dragged behind vehicles until we die. If they don't believe animals should be treated this way, why would they wish it upon a human?

I was appalled by the actions of the lady who threw herself and a small dog against my friend's van as he and his mother were trying to leave the courthouse. Is that not endangering the life of an animal?

I understand there is a great deal of controversy surrounding the case and that emotions are running high, but that in no way justifies the extreme actions of the protestors toward people who have committed no crime, but these animal activists are taking it to an extreme. I was actually scared by the way they were behaving and had never been more relieved when the RCMP showed up to tell the protestors to back off so that we could go back to school.

I think the protestors need to remember that they are grown adults, who should know better, threatening 16 and 17-year-old kids. How disgraceful is that?

People also need to remember that, in our law system, everyone is innocent until proven guilty. The protestors are jumping to conclusions and are relying on facts coming from the media.

I feel that we, as the accused's friends, are handling ourselves in an appropriate manner and that the activists should control their emotions and act in a civilized manner as well.

A kid wondering when adults will start acting like adults,
Chelsea

Take a stand, Didsbury

Dear Mayor Moore
cc: Editor, Didsbury
Review:

I am writing with regards to the animal cruelty story that happened within your community.

I imagine that you are as shocked as my family and friends have been to hear of this sociopathic behaviour by these two young men.

A number of petitions are in circulation and will be forwarded to your office as a way of encouraging political right action in these circumstances.

From your website Didsbury looks to be a wonderful community, however the town seems to be destined to receive international recognition for this atrocious event.

I hope that you and town council will act quickly and judiciously in sending the province, country and world the message that cruelty to animals is not acceptable in Didsbury.

Thank you in advance for taking a stand on behalf of your constituency and the four-leggeds who share the space with you all.

Edward Colley
Victoria, BC

Mayor defends Didsbury

Dear Mr. Colley:

I have attached our October 12 Didsbury Press Release regarding the incident.

You can see that we did respond quickly and judiciously.

I can assure you that Didsburians do advocate for animals, and Didsbury is an outstandingly wonderful community, despite two exceptions to the rule.

There are two levels of government which have authority for laws regarding innocent victims and a more accountable and effective Justice system—provincial and federal.

Didsbury region has had absolutely the strongest voice in Parliament, Myron Thompson, for the past 10 years representing our view that our justice system (and particularly our Youth Justice System) has failed us.

Our Member of Parliament has since spoken on our behalf in Parliament regarding this incident, in consultation with us.

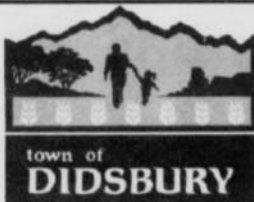

Did you hear him? I am quite sure that his (and our) positive action did not make the news.

Perhaps you have also noticed, that unlike these two youths who actually will be charged in court, the gang of 8 to 11 year olds in Winnipeg who almost succeeded in burning a handicapped boy to death will not even be charged despite earlier incidents. They are immune from prosecution because of their age under our Youth "Justice" System.

Since we have had the strongest voice in Canada regarding protection for the innocent and the need to make the Justice System more effective and accountable for the past 10 years, I would like to ask you if you would ensure that your Member of Parliament would support and assist our Didsbury and area MP in our long quest for appropriate consequences for criminals.

Yours for effective advocacy,

Dorothy Moore

VOLUNTEER BOARD MEMBER WANTED

The Centennial Trail Committee is currently accepting applications for one Board Member who would be interested in meeting once a month with a group of dedicated and enthusiastic individuals. The main focus of the committee is to promote the trail system and raise funds directly for trail construction. If you have a background in fundraising, grants or promotion and are interested in contributing to this worthwhile project, please contact Colleen Gustavson, Town of Didsbury: 335-3391.

Message from the Community Constable

The time of year has arrived again, WINTER. This means snowy sidewalks. The Town of Didsbury has a bylaw that states the owner or occupier of ANY premise within the Town of Didsbury SHALL remove and clear away all snow from the sidewalks adjoining such premises within 24 hours of the last snowfall. Upon failure to do so the Town may provide for the clearing of such sidewalks at the owners expense. An additional charge of one hundred dollars ($100.00) will be added to the actual cost of removing the snow.

This is a warning to all residents to clear your sidewalks of snow within the 24 hour period. If complaints are received your sidewalks will be cleared and the owners will be billed accordingly.

So let us all do our part in keeping the sidewalks clean and safe for everyone to use.

G. Hnatiuk, Community Constable—Town of Didsbury

PUBLIC WORKS— MESSAGE BOARD

- With winter road conditions upon us, please be advised that the Public Works Department will prioritize the sanding/cleaning of town roads for the safety of its citizens.
- The leaf bin at the Recycle Centre has been removed for the year.
- The Didsbury landfill north of Didsbury will be opening Nov. 30th. For further information contact Mountain View Regional Waste Management Commission at 556-8120.
- Weather permitting, the construction of 20th Street should be completed within two weeks.

Curfew back on council table

Youth input key to curfew success

BY JODI STYNER
Didsbury Review

A curfew for Didsbury teens is back on the table and Town council is eager to implement one sooner rather than later, as long as there's community buy-in.

Consultation, particularly with high school students, will play an important role in how a final curfew would be shaped.

"I would definitely want to have high school kids involved because we have to look at it this way - 99 per cent of the kids are good to great and we have one per cent or less who are scurrying different ways," said Didsbury RCMP Sgt. Kevin O'Dwyer.

"I definitely do not want to penalize the 99.9 per cent of the good youth who are doing great things in our community, so we need to talk to them."

In the meantime, council and police will start working on a design they feel works for them and will then revisit the plan once community input is gathered.

Sgt. Kevin O'Dwyer said he stands by the need for parent buy-in, first discussed with council in July.

"There has to be parent involvement. I can't raise their children," he said.

"All we can do is assist parents, and try to help them in raising their children, making sure they're safe at home."

A fine for parents is one possibility to ensure they are involved in the process.

"If we do go with a curfew, then that's something that we don't necessarily have to enforce," said O'Dwyer.

"We can go up to the youth and say, 'hey guys, it's after 11 p.m. and you're out past curfew, it's time to head home.'"

But having a bylaw in place would give police something to work with that they could enforce if they felt the need. Sundre Mayor Roy Cummings, said his town's curfew, which has been in place for nine years this month, works well as a tool.

He said police don't drive around looking to catch kids who are out too late, but the bylaw is handy in some instances, like when they need a crowd to disperse.

"A lot of the communities that do have a curfew in place, a lot of them have never ever laid a charge," said O'Dwyer. Mayor Moore said she'd like to see a little enforcement.

"One of the things I think we might have to do if we did something like that, is to coordinate the groups like C.O.P. and ensure that it's a time of year where you have the capacity to do the 'broken window' theory, where you deal with it up front, right now, like a substitute teacher," she said.

"You don't wait, you do it now and you enforce it. That kind of initial response would mean that you'd have a lot less trouble as time goes on."

In the wake of Alberta's Solicitor General suggesting a possible provincewide curfew, O'Dwyer questioned whether council might want to hold off on its own curfew, but nods of no suggested the consensus was to move ahead.

A survey will be drawn up to gather youth input and the Town and Police will then follow up by going into the schools and talking with the kids.

In that survey, the Town will also incorporate questions about what kinds of youth programs students might like to see the town implement.

That way, they aren't spending taxpayer dollars on something kids don't want and won't use.

RCMP look ahead to 2007-08

BY JODI STYNER
Didsbury Review

Taking aim

After extensive consultation with the community, Didsbury RCMP have outlined their three top priorities for the 2007-08 fiscal year.

They've listed property vandalism as the number one issue, followed closely behind by boredom and loitering, which Sgt. Kevin O'Dwyer said seem to go hand in hand with vandalism.

The third priority is drug enforcement, abuse, and trafficking.

"Those seem to be the concerns that we see, or hear of a lot in our office and in my talking to people," said O'Dwyer.

While some people may wonder why the list was limited to three priorities, O'Dwyer said narrowing the focus is the most effective way to police.

"If we want to actually be able to accomplish something with these directives, if we have 10 and we only accomplish one, we've only accomplished 10 per cent of our goals," he said.

"If we have two or three, and are able to do something with all of them, we'll be able to accomplish 100 per cent of our goals."

In dealing with the first two priorities, in particular, O'Dwyer said RCMP will continue to work closely with Citizens On Patrol.

Curfew is another possibility he thinks could make a big difference.

Enhanced policing

With the success of the first bike patrol initiative earlier this year, O'Dwyer would like to see the program grow, but he said

RCMP will need more support in order to do that.

"What we found with our bike patrol is our guys were coming in on their own time, and they might have worked all day and then they were going out for several hours at night on the bikes, just to try to get this program up and running," he said.

"That's not really fair to them, or to their families, and after a certain amount of time, they're going to say 'to heck with it.'"

He's suggesting an enhanced policing contract, similar to the one Sylvan Lake has implemented.

But it will mean a cost to the Town.

"What we could do then, is to pay these people to be out there, outside of their regular duties," said O'Dwyer.

"It also gives us the option of going to other towns with members who are trained on the bikes, to come to our town and work those enhanced policing shifts."

That could bring in officers from Olds, Sundre, Airdrie, and Cochrane, to help alleviate Didsbury's resource-strapped force.

New members

Mayor Dorothy Moore anticipates that as population numbers come out in March, Didsbury should get at least one or two new members to meet the demand.

"Our district is going to be well up," she said.

"Carstairs, Didsbury and Cremona have all grown."

The Didsbury detachment will welcome a new member in December to replace Cst. Hammond who is set to leave in the summer.

This is my air.

Which is why we intend to keep it clean.

Alberta's oil and gas industry has already made huge strides in reducing air emissions. But at spots like valves, seals, joints and fittings, tiny amounts of hydrocarbons, such as natural gas, could leak into the atmosphere. These are called "fugitive emissions."

Individually, fugitive emissions are not significant. But together they add up. And so we're working to reduce them.

BP Canada Energy Company has developed a system to quickly detect, repair and control fugitive leaks in operations like its compressor stations near Slave Lake, Sundre and Valhalla. The result: in 2005, the company's operations sent 150,000 tonnes fewer emissions into our air, equivalent to taking approximately 680 cars off the road.

The industry is planning on building on BP's success. Together with provincial regulators, we're developing guidelines for all oil and gas facilities to address fugitive emissions. These will help us achieve broader industry reductions.

Cat bylaw under review

Household limit and nighttime trapping considered

BY JODI STYNER
Didsbury Review

A Didsbury resident fed up with cats wandering unsupervised in her area may finally have her concerns answered.

Denise Smith asked council to consider changing the cat bylaw to limit the number of cats per household and extend the hours that residents are allowed to trap strays.

Council heeded those suggestions during its regular Nov. 7 meeting, and passed first reading of the amended bylaw.

The first of the two new additions states: owners are allowed a limit of four cats per household over the age of six months.

In the original bylaw, traps could not be set out between the hours of 11 p.m. and 6 a.m.

The addition allows residents to trap cats around the clock, as long as the temperature is no colder than 0 C.

Council thoroughly debated the temperature, considering whether 0 C or 5 C was more appropriate.

Councillor Stan Neufeld took a clear stance.

"To me zero is good," he said.

"To a cat,
five degrees,
that's like living in Hawaii. That's

STAN NEUFELD
Town Councillor

"To a cat, five degrees, that's like living in Hawaii. That's not cold for a cat."

But some councillors disagreed. "My only concern is if it gets cold really early and stays cold, the cat may be in danger and they're not where they can move around or anything," said Ernie Ryckman.

Stephanie Dodyk agreed saying, "you don't throw a warm, fuzzy blanket in there."

Neufeld made the motion based on a 0 C temperature, arguing that 0 C is a "good reference point."

"You can set a glass of water out at 1 C and it won't freeze, so it's fine," he said.

Council voted and Dodyk was the lone opposer.

The Town will advertise the bylaw amendments and provide public input before moving to second and third readings.

Smith said she's happy with the amendments and hopes it will address nighttime cat issues.

She said since the traps became available and pet owners have become wise to the bylaw's limited hours, more and more cats have been out after 11 p.m.

Christmas Helpers gearing up

Community project gives real help to real people

BY JODI STYNER
Didsbury Review

With Christmas less than six weeks away, Didsbury's Christmas Helpers are busy preparing for another big season of giving.

The Angel Trees will be going up within the next couple of weeks, one in Victoria Square mall and the other in the post office.

Each of the angels bears the age and sex of a child in need of a gift, but they represent more than just pieces of paper.

"What we want people to know is it's not just an angel," said co-organizer Linda Regner.

"Those are real people, so if you have a five-year-old boy on there, or say a nine-year-old girl, think of it in your heart and think of what they'd really like."

Then the "whirlwind" begins on the evening of Dec. 21 when the gifts collected are wrapped at Zion Evangelical Missionary Church.

The following morning, on Dec. 22, is hamper day when all the gifts are organized and finally delivered.

"Those last two days are huge," said Regner.

"It's quite amazing to see all the boxes and all the mess and chaos, and to think that by 2 p.m. all that stuff is gone."

While the Christmas Helpers committee technically only consists of two individuals - Linda Regner and Linda Sirt - Didsbury residents have come out in droves to help with the project over the years.

Last year we asked maybe 10 people to help out with the gift wrap and over 100 showed up, so it was just wonderful.

LINDA REGNER
co-organizer, Christmas Helpers

"Last year we asked maybe 10 people to help out with the gift wrap and over 100 showed up, so it was just wonderful," said Regner.

Others came to the door on the day of the gift wrap with last minute presents and wrapping paper to offer.

"I think that's what's kept us going, because we know if we have busy years and it's starting to creep up on us, it's amazing how it works out."

The whole thing is very much a community effort, starting in November when residents start phoning Regner and Sirt, alerting them to families in need.

And it's not always just a matter of money, said Regner. "It's not necessarily for the underprivileged," she said.

"Certainly that's the biggest part, but sometimes, somebody just needs a little bit of a lift. There might be something going on in their life."

The project started 23 years ago with Sirt's Sunday school class putting a couple of hampers together for underprivileged families, and has since grown into this huge community initiative that prepares about 90 hampers for delivery each year.

"I think it helps the community bond and I think it's good to do it at that time of year," said Regner.

"It's just a small way the community can come together and uninvitably help our neighbour."

As the commercial aspect of Christmas creeps up on us, Regner and Sirt are reminding the public that the spirit of Christmas is here too.

Anyone who knows of an individual or family in need can call Linda Sirt at 335-2378 or Linda Regner at 335-3857.

The Christmas Helpers are also planning a Christmas dinner at the Elks Hall on Dec. 25 at 1 p.m. for anyone who wishes to join.

Carnival offers up winter fun

Must pre-register soon

All kids aged 6-12 are welcome to join in on the activities, which include skating, swimming, crafts and baking.

The event runs from 9 a.m. - 4 p.m. Friday, Nov. 17 and you must pre-register your child by Wednesday if they wish to participate.

All snacks and lunch are included. Kids just need to show up at the complex with a swimsuit, towel, skates, helmet and mitts.

The Carnival is fully supervised, so parents don't need to be present.

"We have a lot of fun activities planned throughout the day to keep kids busy," said carnival organizer Nicole Aasen.

"It's good for the kids. It keeps them busy and they're not home by themselves, and parents know they're somewhere where they're safe and happy."

This event is similar to last year's Christmas Carnival. It's just happening a few weeks early.

"December is a really busy month, so we're happy to do it in November," said Aasen.

"It really was a success last year. It was tons of fun and we really hope that it will be this year again."

To register your child for the Winter Carnival, call the pool at 335-7369.

This is my livestock.

Which is why we want to protect its health.

To do so, Alberta's oil and gas industry works with the Alberta Beef Producers, provincial regulators, and Alberta Agriculture, Food and Rural Development to fund the voluntary Animal Health Investigation program.

If a livestock owner suspects an animal health concern may be related to oil and gas, his or her own veterinarian assesses the situation.

• The veterinarian, the independent Animal Health Investigator, the livestock owner and the oil and gas company work together to gather as much information as possible.

• The Animal Health Investigator analyzes the data and issues a report.

• The livestock owner and the oil and gas company use the report to find a solution.

This program has been demonstrating since 1995 how oil and gas companies and livestock producers can work together to resolve joint issues. We're committed to continuing to build on this tradition of co-operation.

To learn more, please visit www.oilandgasinalberta.ca.

"This process is objective, fair, open and transparent. It gives the livestock owner someone he or she knows and trusts to gather the data that's necessary."

Up and Down the Fireman's Ladder

Until the weekend, we had been having a very nice month. Then, as we all know, the snow came and spoiled everything. I just hope that we have another fall like we did last year.

October was a fun and exciting time around the fire hall. On Oct. 11, we had an open house for fire prevention week. We had about 30 people drop in for donuts and juice, and at the same time, we demonstrated the jaws of life by taking the roof off a car.

Mayor Moore presented Jenni Dodman, Pierre Martel and Terry Stevenson with their Alberta Emergency Services medals. Congratulations to each of you.

On Oct. 23, Rick Mousseau, Bob Wright, Doug Steven and myself, (Tyrone Patton), went to Edmonton to receive the Fire Services Exemplary Service Medal of Canada. The ceremony was held at the Royal Alberta Museum, and the medal was presented to each of us by the Lieutenant Governor of Alberta, the Honourable Norman Kwong. This medal is presented to firefighters who have been in the fire service of more than 20 years, and bars are given every ten years after that. Rick Mousseau, Doug Steven and myself each received a medal, and Bob Wright received a bar. One other member of the department, Greg Hnatiuk, also qualified for this medal, and will be receiving it shortly.

We would like to welcome two new members to the department. Joe Lesoway and Jordie Gibson have finished their training and received their pages. We look forward to many years of service from these two gentlemen.

Since last report, we responded to 10 calls. They were:

- MVCs - 4
- Alarm, no fire - 3
- Wildland fire - 1
- Ambulance assists - 1
- Mutual aid - 1

There were four calls during the day and six in the evening, for a total of 10.5 hours in the field.

New Rector, New Programs

After being without a rector for two years, the parishioners of St. Cyprian's Anglican Church in Didsbury are delighted to announce the arrival of Reverend Carole Nixon Armstrong.

In addition to her Master of Divinity Degree from Trinity College, Toronto School of Theology, Carole brings with her many years of experience in economic development. Carole arrived several months ago and, in addition to familiarizing herself with the new parish and community, has been busy settling into her new home.

For our parish life, Carole has re-established the 8:30 a.m. Sunday communion service. She is planning study sessions on the following themes: The Gospel According to Harry Potter, Would the Real Mary Magdalene Please Stand Up? and Lenten Bible Studies. Also in the works are Community Commuter Dinner Nights and Labyrinth Walks. If any of these activities and studies interest you, please feel free to call Carole at 335-4664.

Our next special event is our Christmas Pudding Tea, to be held on Nov. 18 from 2:00 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. We look forward to welcoming you to our church for fun and fellowship.

This is my home.

Which is why we support Alberta's communities.

Alberta's oil and gas industry directly and indirectly supports 275,000 jobs across the province. We also buy products and services from local businesses—which, in turn, employ local people.

Take Innisfail's Metal Form Industries. Its 14 workers—a peak reached only once before in its 25-year history—are all from Innisfail and area. They've helped Metal Form Industries create a thriving operation turning sheet metal into vehicle cabs. Oil and gas firms account for more than 65 per cent of its business.

That's the effect of the oil and gas industry on just one company in one community. On a bigger scale, royalties, fees and taxes paid by the petroleum sector make up over 40 per cent of the province's revenue.

Government uses this money to support projects like roads, schools and hospitals across Alberta.

In ways like these, the benefits of our industry extend beyond the oil patch—right into the homes of Albertans.

To learn more, please visit www.oilandgasinalberta.ca.

"Thanks to having a job in my local community, I can see my wife and little boy every night."
